

spike it explores peoples relationship with paper at work. Whether you view it as a product of your achievement, a record of work, an annoyance, or the bane of your life! The paperless office was predicted but has it arrived?

The spike it project is seeking people and organisations to collect paper for a papercull event when the spike will visit your office or place of work. You will have the opportunity of spiking your paper. This event will be filmed and used in the final gallery installation together with the spike and a plaque identifying the place of work or individual.

If you are interested in this project and have a location for the spike to visit, leave your name and contact details. Suitable locations will be given collection boxes and a date will be arranged for the spike visit.
